

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An infrared image sensor has a sensor array composed of plural sensor elements and provided on a silicon substrate. A temperature compensation element is provided on the silicon substrate for each sensor element adjacently to the sensor element, and performs temperature correction to an output of the sensor element. Accordingly, the infrared image sensor can provide stable output even when environmental temperature varies.